The purpose of this research is to analyze the state of journalistic cultures across the world, and the professional roles that guide the work of the journalists in the current media landscape. We would therefore like to ask you a few questions concerning your professional background, practices and views towards your role as a journalist, as well as the different reporting styles and narratives you are able to practice in your work.

The entire survey should take about 12-15 minutes of your time.

Your responses and personal details (about who you are) remain confidential and are not shared with others. You will remain completely de-identified in any publication of the research.

The aggregated, de-identified data collected through this survey will be shared with the international research group in order to allow for a cross-cultural comparison of findings. This data will be sent electronically with password protection to the international project lead, Dr. Claudia Mellado of the Pontificia Universidad Católica de Valparaíso in Chile, to be merged with data gleaned from other countries. The de-identified (Country) data will be stored by Dr. Mellado in a password protected computer and shared through a password protected platform. The data will be kept and stored on a password protected computer or locked drawer by Dr. Mellado and the primary researchers for an indefinite period of time.

Your participation in this research study is voluntary. If you decide to participate in this research, you may withdraw at any time.
